This highly regarded course will offer two working weeks of intensive study of the various aspects of maritime law and the way they interlink with each other and operate in the wider commercial context are examined in depth.

In the course of the two weeks there will be ample time for extensive discussion, both formally, through case-studies and Q&A sessions, and informally out of class.

Delegates will be provided with comprehensive course materials and the relevant documentation.

The speakers are academics from the leading research institute in the United Kingdom, all with practical experience and insight.
